Take a treetop stroll at Kew Gardens

Rain Forest Romp

From beefeaters to ravenmasters, unexpected eccentricities will delight young visitors in London. You can find life-size plaster dinosaurs in Crystal Palace Park and a living rain forest at the London Zoo in Regent's Park. Monkeys swing through the tropical canopy at the Clore Rainforest Lookout, a glass-roofed bio-dome that doubles as a breeding ground for endangered species. The Nightzone provides insight into how the nocturnal inhabitants come alive after dark.

The Secret Life of Trees

With over 40,000 plant varieties, the 300-acre Kew Gardens (District Line or London Overground) is another great place to celebrate biodiversity. Sixty feet above ground, the Xstrata Treetop Walkway offers a giddy glimpse into the life of trees. The snaking metal walkway was designed by the architects of the London Eye, which is visible through the foliage.
