Handel House Museum

25 Brook Street, London

Handel House Museum at 25 Brook Street, London was home to the great baroque composer George Frideric Handel. He lived here from 1723 until his death in 1759, and composed some of the greatest music in history, including Messiah, Zadok the Priest and Music for the Royal Fireworks.

The museum celebrates Handel's life and works, displaying portraits of Handel and his contemporaries in finely restored Georgian interiors and by bringing live music back to his house. Frequent music rehearsals, weekly concerts and special musical events in addition to regular displays and exhibitions bring Handel's world to life.

Historical rooms

For your own safety, you are advised to wear sensible shoes when visiting as the museum contains original 18th century floors which can be uneven. Stilettoes damage the original flooring and leather soled-shoes are particularly unsuitable. Please note that certain rooms have low lighting.

Recitals and Events

Please note that the Rehearsal and Performance Room is closed during recitals and events. Visitors will be charged a concession price when this occurs. Please see the What's on page to check if this will apply during your visit, or telephone the Museum to confirm with a member of staff.

Photography

No photography is allowed in Handel House Museum.
